

Panos Radio South Asia (PRSA) is an undertaking of Panos South Asia. In keeping with Panos South Asia's mission to encourage and stimulate informed public debate on key developmental issues in South Asia and to ensure the effective flow of information from media in the south to the north and vice versa, Panos Radio South Asia produces radio programs to be distributed via the internet and Interworld Radio (www.interworldradio.org).

PRSA currently produces a 15-minute radio magazine titled "Panoscope" and "Development Dilemmas", a nearly half-an-hour long radio discussion, that aims to capture the voices of poor and marginalized people in South Asia on general development issues including Panos South Asia's five thematic areas - conflict, environment, globalization, media pluralism and public health.

Panoscope

'Panoscope' is an independent production of Panos Radio South Asia (PRSA). A fortnightly production, 'Panoscope' is a 15-minute radio magazine with features, commentaries, oral testimonies and interviews on key South Asian development issues. 'Panoscope' is committed to providing media space for raising the voices of the poor and marginalized in development and issues not often heard in the mainstream media.

Development Dilemmas

'Development Dilemmas' brings together multiple voices twice a month on a single theme, drawing the attention of policy makers as well as ordinary citizens to the innumerable nuances that characterize our development models. It is a seminar room; a meeting place; a debating site and an incubator of new ideas, methods, and systems to facilitate free flow of knowledge from the portals of academia and experts to ordinary citizens and vice-versa through the wonderful gateway called media.

Panos South Asia (PSA) realizes the compelling needs to bridge the yawning gap between the decision making process and the citizens. Only a multi-directional information flow can create inclusive policy paradigms that make people's life less burdensome.

Panos South Asia's latest effort, to create a public site 'Development Dilemmas', stems from this desire. The focus is to constantly remind everyone that there is no ONE right opinion but multiple right opinions and the need of the hour is to make this as plural and inclusive as possible.

Development Dilemmas (DD) is a radio discussion, of around half-an-hour duration. It is an independent production of Panos Radio South Asia, an undertaking of Panos South Asia.
